HONEST JOHN COX'S FIND

Picked Up $6,000 Worth of Diamonds in the Street.

There is at least one man in this city to-day whose firm belief in the old adage, "Honesty is the best policy," has made him a reputation to be envied. John Cox has been an employee of the Fifth Avenue Hotel these twenty-five years. He was a beardless English boy when he began. He is now a dapper little man with a thin face, bristling brown mustacne and a big family. He is the mail carrier for the caravapsary and five or six times a day he brings the mai from the Post-Office. The reading-room is his special charge the rest of the day. He had brought the last mail and tidled up the reading-room for the last time, when at o'clock Baturday evening he started for his home at 2303 Third avenue, over a little housefurnishing store kept by his wife. As he crossed the road towards Madison Square be stumbled over a large object on the street-car track. It was a large alligator skin valiserosperous looking bag and well filled. John concluded that some traveller had dropped it off a passing coach. That was all he thought about it. He had no curiosity to know what was inside the bag. for it belonged to some one cisc. He simply returned to the hotel with it, and dropping it on the desk before Chief Clerk Hoagland remarked, like an "Here's a bag I found in the middle of the street. Somebody's lost it, sir. Good night, sir, I guess I'll be getting home." Off he went, and Mr. Hosgiand, finding no name on the bag, called Mr. Vilas, proprietor of the house. Together they opened the bag, and lot there was in it a small fortune in rich

John Mathews, lived in East Seventy-diest street, and a telegram to that address brought Mr. Mathews down to the hotel at midnight. He related how he and Mrs. Mathews set out that evening for a steamship pier to embark for the South.

He had handed a bag to the coachman and at the pier it was gone. Then he learned for the first time that his wife's jewels, $6,000 worth were in the bag.

The trip was postponed, the tourists returning home, but stopping on the way to insert "Lost and Reward" advertisements in the Sunday papers.

"What shall I give John Cox?" Mr. Mathews saked, puzzied.

"What you like. Nothing if you like. Cox Emows nothing of the contents of the bag, and in Pril leave it anywas."

John Cox was completely overwhelmed when Mr. Hogeland put that crisp $100 note in his hand. To an Evening World world have a suppose Mr. Mathews ought to give some thing, and I am grateful for want he gave.

"Do with it? Well, sirl come in good, that you on imagine. I have six children. My little wife was pleased awfully. We'll pay some little debts, buy some shoes for the calidren, and imagine. I have shoe hot for he calidren, and sittle the little debts, buy some shoes for the calidren, and imagine. I have shoe hot he cold gentleman ten pound—150. Matthewa. If I had been a little fol dishonest I'd have looked in the bag. Then it might have tempted me not to tell. I've no use for damonos, though, and it was none of my busimess what was in somebody else's bag."

Mr. Matthews and write resumed their journey, and left a happy, grateful family behind them.
